

I would like to urge the continued ban on the use of cellular phones aboard aircraft during flights. As a frequent traveler, I believe that people are generally too loud and discourteous when talking on their cell phones. Flying is already a stressful and hectic experience for most people, and the use of cell phones would create another opportunity for a person to irritate other customers.